

This seminar series includes critical discussion and evaluation of relevant topics in medical education and presentation and review of methods employed by researchers in medical education. The seminars on the first Wednesday of the month consist of topics that critically evaluate new teaching methods or educational curricula. The seminars on the third Wednesday of the month deal with topics in research methods in medical education and serve as a forum to present research-in-progress or completed research projects. Enrollees for this series would be expected to present at one of these conferences during the year, having reviewed their presentation topic with the course director prior to the session. Attendance at 16 sessions is required for 1 credit.
